

Joe Olson is an optometrist in a third-generation optometry practice, which began in Brigham City in the 1940's. Since moving here in 2012, Joe, his wife Lacey, and four children have come to love the people of Brigham. He often volunteers as a coach for Brigham City Parks and Recreation, and also enjoys being involved in plays at a local theater. Joe believes we should love where we live, and is invested in Brigham City's future. He is willing to make the necessary decisions to ensure a safe and enriching environment for the rising generation. With deep family roots in Brigham City, Joe has tremendous respect for the traditions, heritage, and perseverance of the residents. As the owner of a successful business, Joe has the skills and experience necessary for effective administration, budgeting, planning, and growth. He advises in sensitive situations daily while in the care of his patients, and hopes to employ his talents working with people while serving as a councilman for Brigham City. As a city councilman, Joe wants to emphasize the needs of our youth and inspire residents to be more engaged in the community.
