

Nicole Butler

Perry City Council 2017

From my back deck I can see much of what makes Perry great: gorgeous mountains, abundant trees, and peaceful residents. I can also see its flaws: worn roads and many mosquitoes.

As the academic director of a private school, it's my job to see what's working and what's not. Directing a school has taught me how to meet all stakeholders' needs, and that's exactly what I will do for Perry citizens.

I've also learned over the past decade teaching at USU and Weber State that research solves almost anything. It's my belief that Perry's flaws can be improved through research and dialogue. Let's research ways to save the city money. Let's poll residents to set budget and development priorities. Let's discuss how to create sustainable growth as new citizens choose Perry for the perfect place to live and operate businesses.

My family and I love Perry. We love the wonderful schools our daughter has attended and the events hosted by the city. We have deep gratitude for the police officers and civil servants who work hard to keep Perry safe. I want to help make Perry an even more perfect place to call home.

Follow at www.facebook.com/ElectNicoleButler