

STAYING IN ST. GEORGE

March is a beautiful time of year in St. George, and we're sure you'll enjoy your time here. Spring is just beginning and the trees and flowers are starting to get their buds. As in many locations, weather can be a little variable with the nights still getting pretty cool and the days warming to the 50s, 60s and even 70s.

If you go to www.visitstgeorge.com, you'll find a complete listing of places to stay - whether you're looking for a hotel or for an RV Park. There are many of each in St. George, with links to their websites and complete information about amenities offered and instructions regarding how to reserve rooms and space. If you would like to go a little further away either during your time at the show or before/after, there are also listings in Hurricane and Springdale, just outside Zion National Park.

This site is also a wealth of information about places to eat and things to do in the area, so I encourage you to take a look.

We know many of you will have RVs and trailers with you, and we're sorry but the Convention Center does not allow vendors to camp in their parking lot over night. As an alternative to an RV Park, there are two Walmarts in town and we regularly see the outer edges of the parking lots dotted with RVs, so that may be another option that is right for you if you are fairly self-contained.

Please don't hesitate to send us an email at gemsofthedesertquiltshow@gmail.com if you have any questions at all or are having trouble locating the information you need or finding a place to stay. We're a pretty creative bunch, and will assist in any way we can!
