

Sweet Baby Hawk Tutu for Seahawk Fans

Designed by Nickie at our Northgate store

Make your baby a Hawk Star with a terrific, twirly tutu for the half-time show!

What You'll Need

6 yards of 54"-wide tulle (if using 3 colors as shown, 2 yards of each; for a thinner tutu, you can use a total of 3 yards instead of 6)

1 stretchy headband

Ribbon (optional)

Rotary cutter and mat (scissors will work as well)

Crochet hook (optional)

How to Make

1. From the tulle, cut 3" x WOF strips; then cut each strip in half at fold line. You should end up with a total of about seventy 27" strips. It's fine if the pieces do not look perfect; use scissors to trim them down to look more even, if you want.

2. Start from the bottom up, working by color (for example, my bottom is gray, middle is blue, and top is green). It may look limp at the beginning. Don't worry; your tutu will get more and more full as you go.

3. Stretch headband apart to be able to see holes. Fold a strip of tulle in half and thread the folded end through the first hole, from the inside as shown.

4. This is when a large crochet hook is super handy — use it to pull the loop through and save your fingertips!

5. Pull tulle through just enough to make a loop.

6. Thread the ends of tulle through this loop and pull tight.

7. Repeat this for every hole in headband all the way around for each color. If making thinner tutu with 3 yards, do every other hole.

After the first row is complete, make a second row of the same color above it for a total of two rows per color. When threading middle rows, thread from the front, hooking back toward you to make the loop. For a thinner tutu, make only 1 row of each color, skipping 1 row of holes in the headband between each row of tulle.

8. Continue making rows until all holes are threaded.

9. Once your tutu is complete, you have the option of adding ribbon, using the same process of threading to attach.
