Like almost every morning, I took my dog for a walk early this morning. She normally runs free, no chains. She stays in the yard and we are very rural. The only time you can see our neighbors (barely) is in the winter when the leaves are off the trees.

So why take her for a walk? She's an awesome dog, the best I've ever had but she does have one flaw. She likes to bark at random objects, like the leaf that went skittering across the snow, the chipmunk that hides in the woodpile... and..... Hubby is a light sleeper. So, if I go out with her, I can keep her from barking at the world and have a happier home.

This morning when I was walking through the meadow, I was reminded of why I LOVE Michigan in the winter. It's quiet, it's dark and the barely-there light that reflects off of the snow is so peaceful. Yeah, I think I'll stay!
