Give Your Quilt a Special Edge with Prairie Point Binding

There's more than one way to bind a quilt, and this method just so happens to be one of the most quirky and fun. Prairie points are folded triangles made from fabric squares, and can be used to decorate table runners, pillows, tea towels and — you guessed it — quilt edges. Plus, finishing your quilt with a prairie point binding is just as easy as it is fun — here's what you need to know to make it happen.

On the Homestead...

Well, that was a short summer! We had our usual 6-7 months of winter, a nice week and a half, and now we're back to winter.

Not quite tundra winter, but 25 degrees and snow on the ground.

I shouldn't complain, I always say that we get our last hurrah (big snowstorm) right around Easter, and if this was it, I'll take it, but guys... my new greenhouse is done and I want to go play.

The temps in the greenhouse this morning were 35 degrees. Knowing this ahead of time, I brought in all of the tomatoes and peppers, most of the rest are either not poking their heads above soil yet or are cold hardy.

So here they all sit on my kitchen counters, table... waiting for the temps to rise. And hubby, ever vigilant of my efforts to play in my greenhouse, got some calking to plug some of the holes out there. I keep 2 heat lamps going out there all the time (so far), so plugging holes will be a nice thing.

I have one of my baby chicks with curled under toes. This is an easy fix, requiring a band aid and a piece of cardboard. So, this afternoon that will happen. Hopefully within a day or two her little toes will uncurl!

This week's puzzle!

Restaurant Tables. Soooooo cool with all of the colors!
