

Today at the Cabin!

Not a lot of “new” going on this week as I took a bit of a break to do some hiking and camping in the “God’s Country Quality” wilderness that Northern Michigan offers. I shared my tent with ticks, mosquitos and flies, but all in all, it was a total reset! More details further down in the newsletter...

We have some Amy’s Wagon Wheel Creations going on for you. Also, Anne Marcellis

On the Homestead...

I totally took a “pass” this last week and hiked out into the wilderness. Pitched my tiny little tent, set up my sleeping bag, utilized my cook stove to just “be”. No internet, no phone, no electronics... a total reset and boy did I feel great when I emerged on Sunday afternoon.

You gotta do that every now and then!

Went to sleep listening to the water from the river (and the mosquitos and flies outside of my tent), woke up to see the sunrise over the trees and hiked the wilderness for miles and miles. Only saw one tick and that one wasn't on me.

I filtered water from the river and used a tree to.... (a good shovel works wonders!) I went barefoot on some of the trails and totally got myself grounded again. Discovered a river worthy of kayaking, so that will happen too.

Came back feeling like I might survive the summer! And yes, another trip is planned in September. I didn't get a lot of pics because my phone's battery sucks and didn't hold out too long, but here are a few...

This week's puzzle!

Hey! I made my own puzzle from one of my hiking pics!

This is called Northern Michigan Wilderness
