

Today at the Cabin!

Well, we're back. After a horrible August (well, not totally horrible as my son got married, which was fun) we are trying to cope with Kaye's passing as well as incorporating all of the products from her shop into ours. Yikes!!

Don't forget... FREE Shipping for Orders Over $75.00 To The US

Going Mod Quilt Pattern

In two sizes – for wall or bed It is easier than it looks to join the Mod Squad!

On Sale HERE

Perennial Plumes Wallhanging Pattern

Staying true to the large four-block format, this 82" X 82" adaptation introduced a new setting.

The color palette was designed to highlight the change of seasons, which was reinforced by placing the phases of the moon in the border corners.

The quilt would also be lovely highlighting the many shades of autumn leaves.

How to Bind a Quilt – The Complete Guide

By Christa Watson

Congrats! You've just quilted a quilt. You're probably already dreaming about your next one. Only thing is, you still need to bind that beauty!

On the Homestead...

I give up on the garden. Between the winter that wouldn't go away, to the rainforest-like conditions to being gone for 2 weeks and I'm sure there's more, I just couldn't keep up and the weeds claimed it. I did get some tomatoes, cukes, beans and peas though, just not enough to can or freeze.

Makes for a nice relaxing lunch, sitting out in the garden, in the sun munching on raw vegies!

The animals are holding their own. The County Fair was this last week, so there was a lot of time spent out there.

Took my grandson to the off-road races, which as a typical "all boy" boy, he loved. We even did some betting and he managed to almost fleece me!

Time to get the homestead ready for another winter. Garden needs to be put to bed (stakes pulled, tomato cages put away, twine rolled up for next year)... The rototiller needs to be drained of gas and oil and stuck in the corner reserved just for her (yes, it's a her lol), same with the lawn mower.

Since the garden is "done" for the most part, I can let the chickens, turkeys and ducks out of their pen during the day so they can scavenge for bugs, weeds and seeds and then there's the firewood.

Oh, the firewood that we depend on to keep us warm, cook with when the power goes out and just give a cozy feeling to the cabin. You think summer is busy around here? Fall definitely tops it!

This week's puzzle!
