

October Newsletter

"Autumn is the season that teaches us that change is beautiful". Although the author of this saying is unknown, I think it describes the fall season perfectly. Not a day goes by during the fall season where we aren't asked in one form or another to accept change, whether it be the leaves falling, cooler temps, volleyball and football games, or just that hot cup of pumpkin anything.

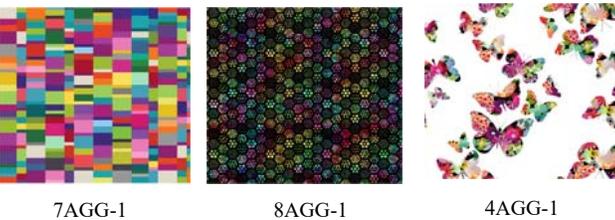

Please take a load off your feet, sit with your favorite beverage, and peruse this month's newsletter. As you read, take a gander at our new (and colorful) fabric options available in our store. I'm sure we just may convince you to "change" and incorporate some of these fabrics choices into your current and future projects!

One of my favorite things about fall besides pumpkin everything is the morning crispness. Some mornings, I just want to stay snuggled under my favorite blanket, whether it is quilted or made of fleece. Speaking of fleece, let's take a quick look at some of the new fleece options we have currently available:

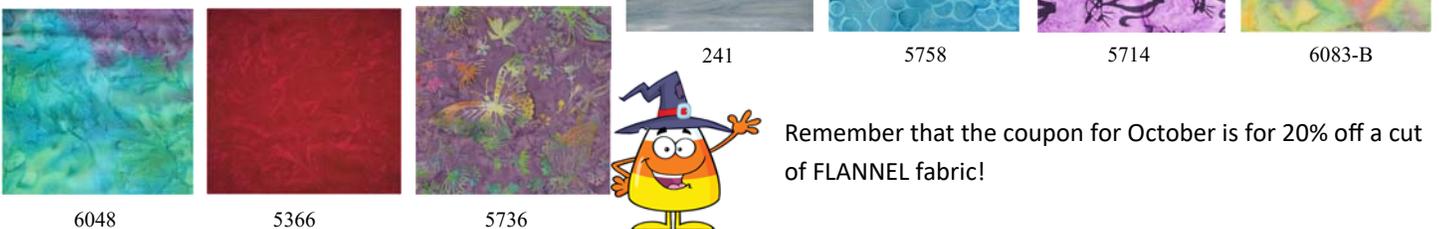

As we think about what's ahead, let's "turn" and change our focus from the fall to winter seasons.

Here are a few options from "A Groovy Garden" fabric line designed by Jason Yenter for In The Beginning Fabrics. Just like fall, look at these lovely vibrant colors this fabric line presents.

Last, but definitely not least, please gaze upon these beautiful and colorful batiks. We are "falling" for all of the beautiful Batik options that we have available!

Remember that the coupon for October is for 20% off a cut of FLANNEL fabric!
