Good News!

This sustainable solar panel can go on buildings or on your clothes

From the OptimistDaily:

"When you see the new sunlight-absorbing material developed by Carvey Ehren Maigue, an engineering student from the Philippines, the colors might remind you of the Aurora Borealis.

In fact, Auroras were what inspired Maigue when he named his new game-changing material, AuREUS. This is a new highly absorbent solar material with incredible flexibility and applications.

Discussing how he wanted to further his invention, Maigue said to euronews.green "I want to create threads and fabric so that even your clothes would be able to harvest ultraviolet light and convert it into electricity."

Candy Drawstring Bag

July's theme is Kids Sewing. And lucky for us Janome has a bunch of kid-friendly projects. This first one is from Alison O'Grady. Here's what she has to say about It

"The only thing more fun than putting in the drawstring and finishing up this bag, is the candy you'll need to eat first to have a wrapper to reuse for the applique! Make this great bag from Alison at Sew Bee It Clothier today!"

AGALU African Drumming

Saturday July 8, 10:00am to 11:00am

Free

Santa Fe Railyard

Near the entrance to SITE Santa Fe

Agalu – an ensemble with roots in Oshogbo, Nigeria that keeps alive traditional Yoruba stories, rituals and mythology through drumming, storytelling and dance – will be performing FREE near the entrance to SITE Santa Fe in the Santa Fe Railyard.

Led by Akeem Ayanniyi, a ninth-generation practitioner of the Yoruba talking drum, Agalu features the traditional talking drum, ashiko, djembe and bata drums. The “Ayan” prefix of Ayanniyi indicates that he descends from a family lineage that can be traced back 700 years to the Yoruba deity of drumming, Ayan Agalu. Akeem is from the western Nigerian town of Erin Oshun near the historic art center of Oshogbo. He has been performing since the age of five and has, as a performer and teacher, toured much of Africa as well as Germany, Brazil, Sweden and the United States. Akeem settled in Santa Fe, NM in 1993 and founded Agalu in 1998. Agalu has performed at dozens of international venues including the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, DC; the Brooklyn Academy of Music; Afrikadey! in Calgary, Canada; Santa Fe’s Thirsty Ear Festival; and the New Mexico Jazz & International Music Festival.

This year, The International Folk Art Market will be celebrating folk art traditions worldwide in a new location, the Santa Fe Railyard Park.
